RoHS Directive

What is the RoHS Directive

The Directive 2011/65/EU of the European Parliament and Council, known as RoHS II, came into effect on January 3, 2013. It restricts the use of hazardous substances in the manufacture of various types of electronic and electrical equipment.

This directive replaced the former Directive 2002/95/EC without any modification to the maximum allowed concentrations of hazardous substances, but extended its scope according also to the delegated Directive 2015/863/EU adopted on March 31, 2015.

RoHS Compliance of Pizzato Elettrica products

According to the definition of electrical and electronic equipment given by the directive, Pizzato Elettrica products belong to category 11, for which the compliance is mandatory as of July 22, 2019.

The CE marking of a product attests its compliance to the Directive.

Pizzato Elettrica endorses and supports the principles of the RoHS Directive and has been operating to conform its products to the requirements of the Directive since 2004.
